GRI Certification Training for the Public Sector

Strengthen public accountability and institutional transparency by building sustainability reporting and ESG disclosure capacity using GRI, the world's leading sustainability reporting framework. Advancing transparency, accountability, and sustainable development.

Public institutions increasingly use sustainability reporting to:

- Strengthen governance and accountability.
- Improve stakeholder trust.
- Communication development impacts.
- Align with national and global sustainability priorities.
- Support evidence-based policy and institutional decision making.

This GRI Certification Program equips public sector professionals with practical sustainability reporting and disclosure capabilities to support responsible governance and institutional transparency.

Applying GRI Across Public Institutions and Development Systems

Government agencies, state corporations, regulators, county governments, development institutions, and public entities are increasingly expected to strengthen ESG disclosure, sustainability accountability, and impact communication.

This training is especially valuable for public sector professionals interested in:

- Integrating sustainability disclosures into institutional reporting and accountability frameworks.
- Strengthening climate, ESG, and development-related disclosures for stakeholders and development partners.
- Improving governance, transparency, and public accountability systems.
- Communicating institutional sustainability and development impact more effectively supporting national sustainability priorities and responsible public sector leadership.

Why train with Us?

Practical Public Sector Perspective

This training is designed specifically for public institutions navigating increasing expectations around sustainability disclosure, institutional accountability, climate reporting, and transparent governance.

The program connects sustainability reporting directly to public sector priorities including:

- Governance and accountability.
- Stakeholder transparency.
- Climate and ESG reporting.
- Institutional credibility.
- Development impact communication.
- Responsible public leadership.
- Industry-relevant learning experience.

Participants engage with:

- Public sector case studies.
- Sustainability reporting exercises.
- Interactive peer discussions.
- Practical disclosure applications.
- Mock assessments and exam preparations.

Our Trainers

Our facilitators combine technical sustainability reporting expertise with practical experience supporting institutions across Africa on ESG disclosure, sustainability reporting, impact communication, and institutional reporting systems.

Collectively, the team has trained thousands of professionals across government institutions, corporates, development organizations, financial institutions, and advisory firms.
